MAJOR GENERAL

THOMAS UPTON GREER

COMMANDING GENERAL

Major General Greer is the 77th Commander of Fort Dix. He came from Korea where he had been senior member of the Military Armistice Commission, United Nations Command. He had previously been Assistant Division Commander of the 2nd Infantry Division. A 1950 graduate of the Military Academy, MajGen Greer saw combat in Vietnam with the 25th Infantry Division. Among his many other assignments he was Commanding Officer of the 2nd Basic Combat Training Brigade at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri from August, 1969 until June, 1971.

FORT DIX, NEW JERSEY 08640

TO THE GRADUATES OF BASIC COMBAT TRAINING

I congratulate you upon your successful completion of basic combat training. You have taken the first significant step toward becoming the well-trained, highly skilled soldier so essential to our modern Army.

Our mission in basic training is to provide you the fundamental skills which every soldier requires before proceeding on to his specialized training. Your success to date indicates that you have the ability, the desire, and the determination to become a soldier upon whom your country and your loved ones can depend to protect the freedoms which we cherish and for which we have fought and died since the founding of our great nation.

As you continue your military service, always be mindful of your responsibilities to your country, to your fellow soldiers, and to yourself. Take advantage of the opportunities available to you—opportunities for education, for advancement, and for learning a skill. Carry out your duties with pride and dignity. In this way you will do your part, as have your fathers and grandfathers before you, in keeping our great country strong and free.

Wear that uniform—which you have proven you have the right to wear—proudly, for you belong to a proud Army. You are a soldier, an American fighting man. You are the ultimate weapon.

Best of luck in your future training and in your Army career to follow.

John Adams Dix served in the Union forces during the Civil War. He later became a Senator from New York and thereafter Governor of the same state. He eventually served as Secretary of the Treasury and as Minister to France.

THE PAST . . .

The post was originally established as Camp Dix on July 16, 1917. During World War I it developed into one of the largest training centers in the nation. After the 1918 Armistice it reduced its garrison and trained Reserve units.

Site of a Civilian Conservation Corps installation in the 1930's, it became, as Fort Dix, a permanent post in 1939. In 1940 a Reception Center was built to process those inducted under the existing Selective Service Act.

During World War II ten Infantry Divisions and many smaller units trained here for overseas duty. After the War in 1945, Fort Dix established a Separation Center that turned 1,250,000 soldiers into civilians again.

Fort Dix has continued as a training Center in the post-World War II years, through the Korean War to the present day.

RECEPTION CENTER

This is the gateway to the Army, to a new way of life. New clothing is issued. Haircuts, eye checks, dental examinations are soon over with. Interviews and a bewildering series of tests take place before the new recruits are assigned to a training unit.

PROFESSIONALS

He is a professional, a member of a demanding profession. He takes the youth of America and produces the best trained soldiers in the world today.

By personal example he guides and inspires his trainees. By virtue of his knowledge and experience he imparts to these young men the knowledge and skills so vital to the soldiers of today's Army.

He works long hours, yet never shows it. He sees his men graduate then turns to receive his next platoon of recruits. He makes routine his challenge as only a dedicated professional can.

He is the elite of the Army's corps of non-commissioned officers. He is a Drill Sergeant.
